DANCE & MUSIC

Sidha Karya

Sidha Karya
World Arts West presents the world premiere of a Balinese shadow play, combining traditional Indonesian music, dance, puppetry and wayang (Balinese shadow theater).

This is part of the Fall Encounter Series, a new endeavor by the producer of the San Francisco Ethnic Dance Festival. This series "represents the realization of a long-time goal," said World Arts West Program Director Lily Kharrazi, presenting "master artists from around the world as well as our own community, in programs of traditional dance and music."

"Sidha Karya" features the acclaimed 30-member orchestra Gamelan Sekar Jaya and guest music director I Dewa Putu Berata; renowned shadow artist Larry Reed; and celebrated Balinese master artists I Made Sija, I Nyoman Catra, and Ni Desak Made Suarthi Laksmi.

Dramatic innovations include a giant screen, dancers as well as puppets, a sophisticated, specially-designed lighting system, and a full gamelan orchestra instead of the usual quartet.

"Sidha Karya" is presented in the Cowell Theater November 10 through 12. For details, see November 10.

Night Garden
Under the direction of choreographer Gay White, The Yoga Garden Dancers, a troupe of 25 dancers and yogis and five musicians, present an evening of innovative and visually stunning movement works.

"Night Garden" blends the ancient art of hatha yoga with the flow and lyricism of dance. The program is performed to original live music by new music composer Miguel Frasconi, percussionist Jim Santi Owen, composer and didgeridoo player Stephen Kent, and singer Eda Maxym. "Night Garden" is presented in the Cowell Theater November 3 through 5. For details, see November 3.

A HUEY P. NEWTON STORY

Magic Theatre's 29th season continues with A Huey P. Newton Story, created and performed by Roger Guenveur Smith, with live sound design by Marc Anthony Thompson.

This intimate and complex interpretation of the founder of the Black Panther Party explores the contradictions of the militant firebrand whose struggle was stamped out by the state and his own inner demons.

Overwhelmed by his community's adulation, the vilification of the mainstream media, and relentless FBI efforts to crush the Panthers, Newton eventually withdrew into isolation and cocaine. He was murdered by a crack dealer in 1989.

In this masterful performance of Newton's words, stories and images, extracted from his autobiography and other sources, Smith examines shifting definitions of power, revolution and heroism.

Roger Guenveur Smith

Roger Guenveur Smith has created and performed Frederick Douglass Now, Christopher Columbus 1992, and with Mark Broyard, the award-winning Inside The Creole Mafia. He has played seasons with the New York Shakespeare Festival and Mabou Mines.

Screen credits include Do The Right Thing, King of New York, Malcolm X, School Daze, Panther, Poetic Justice and Tales From The Hood. Smith studied at the Yale School of Drama and the Keskidee Arts Centre, London, as a Thomas J. Watson Fellow.

This world premiere production is presented in collaboration with Oakland Ensemble Theatre, in residence at the Laney College Theatre where it continues after the Magic Theatre run.

A Huey P. Newton Story previewed October 18 through 21, opened Tuesday, October 24, and runs through November 19. There are post-play discussions October 18 through 21 and every Friday night at the Magic. For details, see November 1.

Oakland Ensemble Theatre performances at Laney College Theatre are November 25 through December 17. For OET/Laney shows, call (510) 763-7774. For Magic Theatre tickets and information, call 441-8822.

OFFBEAT THEATER AT THE BAYFRONT

Miss Julie
During one night of passion, a servant and his female employer switch roles. The experience challenges their beliefs about societal boundaries. A play of "brutal sensitivity," about love, lust, the class struggle, and the battle between the sexes.

German director Peter Glockner's approach to the August Strindberg play, using surreal and abstract forms, brings a new perspective to the issues of sexual harassment and equal rights. For details, see November 1.

The Joy of Gay Sex & Medea
Air Zimmerman Productions presents, in repertory, two musical comedies written and directed by John Fisher.

The Joy of Gay Sex is a tale of Berkeley and San Francisco, of life among the gay and lesbian grads and undergrads at UC Berkeley, and the battle for eternal love. It's a soap opera with a heart, a foray into romance, history and sexual politics.

"The urban romanticism here is as sentimental, smart, and pleased with itself as Woody Allen's is in Manhattan," said Dennis Harvey of the San Francisco Bay Guardian, "and Fisher is almost as talented as Allen."

Medea, The Musical is a comic tale of motherly love and revenge, from the ancient Greek tombs of the dancing dead to the haunted slopes of Mt. Tamalpais. It's a tragedy in the tradition of Euripides, a backstage musical in the tradition of Busby Berkeley.

When gay leading man Paul, playing the role of Jason, begins to take his role (and his leading lady) too seriously, reality and fantasy begin to blur. Paul and Elsa struggle with their roles (both on and off stage), their destinies, and each other. For details, see November 17.

The New Game
Bay Area Theatresports presents an exciting new format from Keith Johnstone, creator of Theatresports, Gorilla Theatre, and the Life Game.

Always on the cutting edge of improv, Johnstone explores ways to involve the audience and challenge improvisers. In The New Game, up to fifteen performers, divided into two teams and guided by two directors, compete in regulation Theatresports matches. The audience awards points and eliminates low scorers after each heat. Only the strong survive to the end! For details, see November 6.

THE WAY THINGS ARE

Ole Nydahl is one of the very few Westerners fully qualified as a Lama and Meditation master in the Tibetan tradition.

In 1969, he and his wife Hannah became the first Western students of the leader of the Kagyu tradition of Tibetan Buddhism, considered one of the greatest yogis of this century.

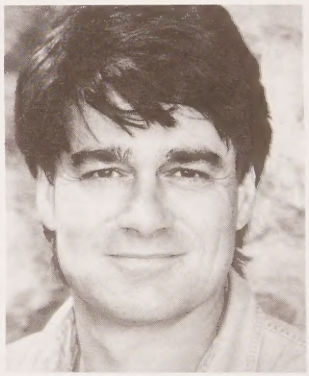
For the last 22 years, the Nydahls have traveled around the world, teaching and setting up meditation centers in Germany, Poland, Russia, South America, Japan, Australia, and Canada. There are sixteen centers in the United States, most of them on the West Coast. They also established more than thirty Buddhist centers in the former Soviet Union, spanning the territory from Ukraine to Vladivostok.

"The Way Things Are" is a lecture series by Lama Ole. "My recipe is simple: tell people the necessity of finding something which can carry them through sickness, aging, and death, and don't be afraid to give them a glimpse of your joy of life.

"Tell people that the mind is like space: open, clear and limitless, and talk about both the way and the goal....Since Buddhism aims at making people independent, our message is meant for mature people."

"The Way Things Are" is presented in the Cowell Theater daily, November 17 through 26. For details, see November 17.

THE POETRY OF CELEBRATION



David Whyte

David Whyte presents the poetry of celebration and creative engagement, reading from his forthcoming book The Well of Stars.

Whyte grew up in Yorkshire, England. With a degree in Marine Zoology, he has worked as a naturalist guide in the Galapagos Islands, led anthropological and natural history expeditions in Peru, Bolivia, and Chile, and traveled India and the hinterlands of Nepal.

He lives on Whidbey Island, Washington State. He reads and lectures throughout the United States, Canada and Europe, and leads poetry and walking tours of Ireland and the English Lake District.

In corporate settings, Whyte uses poetry to bring an understanding of the process of change. He helps clients understand individual and organizational creativity, and apply that understanding to vitalize and transform the workplace.

Clients range from AT&T, Boeing, Blue Cross, Kodak, The Mayo Clinic and Stanford University to British Columbia Government Social Services, the California Association of Independent Schools, Sisters of Mercy and the Washington State Hospital Association.

Whyte says he's "the only bona fide poet to make his living consulting and teaching poetry to corporate America." He hopes to help people find ways to work that nourish the soul. "We simply spend too much time and have too much psychic and emotional energy invested in the workplace to declare it a spiritual desert."

The poetry reading is presented in the Fort Mason Conference Center, Landmark Building A, on November 17, Friday at 8pm. Tickets are $15. For information, call 386-2069.

COMMUNITY & AGRICULTURE

Community Supported Agriculture West presents "Strengthening Our Communities Through Farming and Gardening," a discussion about creating a healthy and viable food system with three leaders of the movement. These inspirational women present their unique perspectives on community and agriculture.

Helena Norberg-Hodge, Director of the International Society for Ecology and Culture, works to promote human-scale alternatives to the dominant development paradigm. She is the author of Ancient Futures, co-author of From The Ground Up: Rethinking Agriculture, and co-editor of The Future of Progress.

Cathrine Sneed, Special Assistant to the San Francisco Sheriff and Director of The Garden Project, believes that taking care of and growing plants not only beautifies and feeds the community, but also saves lives. She has created one of the most innovative rehabilitation programs in California's penal system—an organic farm and garden for inmates as well as a garden program for her post-release students.

Alice Waters, a lifelong advocate for serving in-season, locally grown, organic produce, promotes the link between fine dining and ecological farming through her books, community outreach, and Chez Panisse, the renowned Berkeley restaurant.

The program is presented in conjunction with the first Western Region Community Supported Agriculture Conference, "On the Path to Partnerships Between Farms and Communities." The conference is open to anyone interested in CSAs and sustainable farming: growers, consumers, educators, students, community and rural development specialists, journalists, food security advocates and policy makers.

Community Supported Agriculture is a term for farms that have a direct relationship with a community of consumers. Individual farms are known as CSAs. The movement is spreading "like wildflowers across the West." The conference goal is to promote the environmental, economic and community-building benefits of CSAs.

Since 1986, more than 450 CSAs have been established throughout the country. Each project tries to meet the unique needs of its farmers and members. In most cases, members pay a portion of production expenses at the beginning of the growing season, and in return receive weekly shares in the harvest.

Farmers get operating funds up front, secure a market for the season, and develop a long-term community interest in the viability of their farm.

Consumers receive a diverse supply of fresh, in-season, organic produce, and are frequently invited to take part in the farm through events like workdays and potlucks. Reconnecting non-farmers with the land and the farmers that support them is an important part of Community Supported Agriculture.

The Conference takes place November 12 through 14. For details, see November 12. The public discussion is presented in the Cowell Theater on Monday, November 13 at 8pm. Admission is $7 at the door, $5 in advance. For tickets and information, call (408) 459-3964.

PUPPYDOG ALLSTARS

Dr. Ian Dunbar and Sirius Puppy Training of Berkeley present a spectator event for dogs and their friends that is fun for the whole family, with competitions in fast-moving games that also demonstrate a new theory in dog training.

According to the experts at Sirius, a child can train a dog to roll over and play dead (supine down-stay) much faster than adults can teach a traditional "sphinx-down-stay," because tricks and games are fun and "everyone giggles, including the dog."

The purpose of the Games is to "bring back some sparkle, some excitement and razzle-dazzle" to pet dog training, by motivating owners to want to train their dogs using easy, enjoyable, dog-friendly methods. Each event is designed to improve the quality of the relationship between dogs and people, and to fine-tune essential ingredients of a pet dog's training repertory.

Events include Racing Recalls, A Day in the Life of Joe Pup, Retrieval Races for The Kong Challenge Cup, Musical Chairs, Take and Drop, Long Walkies, Waltzes With Dogs and Recall Relays. The Fort Mason K9 Games are the first of what is planned as annual events at cities throughout the United States and Canada by 1998.

Ian Dunbar received his veterinary degree from the Royal Veterinary College in London, and a doctorate in animal behavior from UC Berkeley. Currently Director of The Center for Applied Animal Behavior in Berkeley, he has written numerous books and produced a variety of videotapes on pet behavior and training.

After a ten-year academic career at UCB and three years off to travel, he returned to Berkeley. "Impressed with…how a 'bad dog' could amazingly quickly be converted into a 'good dog' via interaction with other pack members," said Dunbar, "I decided to start a programme teaching pet owners how to create people-friendly dogs."

Dunbar explains that the approach to training was drastically changed as a result of the use of dogs in the armed services. "…a vital ingredient of military methods involved virtually brutalising the dogs in early training as a severe temperament test to ensure the dogs would not spook when eventually on the field of combat (similar to 'boot camp' for soldiers)."

Competitive obedience training emphasized repetitive and boring exercises. Owners were not encouraged to have fun with their dogs, and dogs were not allowed to have fun as dogs—no socializing or play, no sniffing the ground or other dogs. Says Dunbar, "that's like telling a PR person 'No phone! No fax! SMACK!'"

Dunbar started Sirius Puppy Training in 1980. "It's the same way my father trained our dogs on the farm—training puppies with dog food and a good dog-friendly heart."

The PuppyDog AllStars K9 Games, in the Herbst Pavilion, is a "fast-moving action-packed doggy extravaganza," fun for participants, and "a blast" for spectators. For details, see November 19.

PEOPLE OF THE SUN & WIND

The San Francisco Craft & Folk Art Museum presents a joint exhibition of the history and the handicrafts of the Saami, people who occupy land they call Sámpi in Northern Sweden, Norway, Finland and Russia.

"The Saami: People of the Sun and Wind" was organized by Ajtte, The Swedish Mountain and Saami Museum in Jokkmokk, Sweden. The second part of the exhibition, "Handicraft of the Reindeer People," was produced by De Samiske Samlinger (The Saami Collection) in Karasjok, Norway.

The two exhibitions explore Saami occupations, traditions and thoughts through their crafts, knives, baskets, silver and tin jewelry, carved objects in bone and antler, wood boxes and shamans' drums.

Also on display is handmade clothing. Each family makes its own brightly colored garments with intricate embroidery. This clothing, used now only for celebrations, helps identify the members of a group.

The reindeer is central to the life of this Arctic people. Skins are used for clothing, tents, bags and other items; antlers and bone are carved into decorated knives, spoons, and other utilitarian objects. Because they are seminomadic, everything the Saami make must be taken with them from one camp to another. Thus portability is an integral part of the Saami aesthetic.

Like all people who live close to the land, a deep awareness of ecological issues is fundamental to their way of life. Their philosophy is "Live your life without letting it show that you have lived; leave no trace behind."

Much of the Saami ancestors' way of life is gone; their lives today change rapidly, and nature, which is their home, does too. Saami artisans have organized themselves into guilds and are marketing their crafts throughout Scandinavia. This exhibition provides a look at traditional as well as contemporary crafts of the Saami people.

"The Saami" opened on October 29 and continues through December 31. Lectures and a crafts demonstration are presented in conjunction with the exhibition. The opening reception is Wednesday, November 1, from 5 to 7pm. For details, see Galleries listing. For information, call 775-0990.
